09.00 – 10.00	Setting the scene: Global and European Geopolitics and Macroeconomics Impacted by global geopolitical tensions, a large part of the world seems to remain in a “lower for longer” interest rate environment and global economic growth begins to stall. This situation raises the questions around the outlook and risks for global economic growth, business and investment, and in particular real estate. Will it all come down to political fallout as Europe continues to grapple with Brexit, continued tensions between Hong Kong and mainland China in Asia, and US entering its election year?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Andrea Carpenter, Director, Women Talk Real Estate, and writer (session moderator) ▪ Komal S. Sri-Kumar, President of Sri-Kumar Global Strategies ▪ Hans Timmer, Chief Economist for South Asia, The World Bank
10.00 – 10.30	The Great Debate – Who will be the future winners in real estate: Operators vs Owners Strongly changing demands by occupiers and users of buildings for more flexibility and services, lead to the role of the property investor and manager also changing to respond to these demands. Is it therefore over for the passive property owner as real value is to be achieved by active operational management? Or is there still a role for owners to allocate capital and outsource management? Join us for the Oxford-style debate with our presenters taking opposing views to try to convince you to vote for them.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Thomas Arnold, Global Head of Real Estate, Abu Dhabi Investment Authority (debate moderator) Debaters: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Christina Gaw, Managing Principal and Head of Capital Markets, Gaw Capital ▪ François Trausch, Chief Executive Officer, Allianz Real Estate
